

Texas has 7 months of inventory. That number is lying.

What's inside

- The 7 month lie
- Where discounts actually hide
- Two speeds, one market
- Your first two weeks
- Sellers who cannot wait

The 7 Month Lie

Texas is sitting on roughly seven months of supply statewide.

On paper that reads like a buyer's market.

Almost all of that pile is stacked in the upper price bands.

Yet nothing is listed cheaper.

The Discount Is Hidden

Sellers hate a public price cut. It sits on the record forever.

So they hold the list price and pay you a different way.

Closing costs, rate buydowns, repairs credited back at the table.

Not every seller will do it.

Two Speeds, One Market

Correctly priced homes are still going under contract inside two weeks.

Everything else is sitting past ninety days and going stale.

There is almost no middle left.

Your speed is set early.

Your First Two Weeks

Nearly every showing you will get is crammed into the first fourteen days.

Overprice it and you spend that window teaching buyers to scroll past you.

The price cut you make later never wins that traffic back.

Then you become the deal.

Sellers Who Cannot Wait

The real bargains right now are people who already closed on their next house.

They are covering two payments and counting weeks, not months.

None of that ever shows up in the listing.

How many depends on your ZIP.

Comment

LIST

and I'll DM you

this month's real numbers for your ZIP. Days on market, average seller concessions, and how many listings have gone stale

Save this for later.