

Year one I sold
four houses.
Year four explains why.

What's inside

- Four houses, year one
- Ninety boring minutes
- Paying yourself last
- The deal I refused
- What year four looked like

Four Houses. That Was It.

Everyone who started when I did wanted a huge first year.

I wanted a year I could copy and paste.

Copying it cost me things I liked.

Ninety Minutes, Every Morning

Same block, same three tasks. Calls, follow ups, notes.

Boring on a Tuesday. Undefeated over two years.

Then the money showed up and lied.

I Paid Myself Last

Every check funded the business first. Taxes, marketing, six months of runway.

Whatever survived that was mine to spend.

The runway got used sooner than planned.

The Listing I Turned Down

Wrong price, seller would not move, and I needed the check.

I told him no and drove home sick about it.

That no showed up on paper later.

Year Four

The pipeline started feeding itself.
Repeat clients, referrals, people who remembered I told them the truth.
Four houses in year one built the thing that runs now.

Somebody you know is at month eleven.

Send this to someone who is eleven months into something and starting to quietly doubt it.

Follow for more.
