

Four in ten Texas sellers did this last month

swipe —

What's inside

- Four in ten
- Two speeds, one market
- Inventory nobody expected
- What sellers pay now
- The 60 day window

Four In Ten

Roughly four out of ten active Texas listings cut their asking price last month.

That is not a crash. That is sellers finally letting go of 2022 numbers.

The cuts are not random.

Two Speeds, One Market

Priced right, homes here still go in under two weeks with multiple offers.

Priced on hope, they sit for months and cut twice.

Same street. Completely different outcome.

Something bigger caused the split.

Inventory Came Back

Texas is carrying more homes for sale than it has in over a decade.

Buyers can walk away now, and sellers know it.

Sellers are already paying for it.

What Sellers Pay Now

Closing costs, rate buydowns, repairs, even the first year of taxes.

A large share of Texas deals close with the seller covering something.

Not everyone gets the same deal.

The 60 Day Window

A seller who said no at day 20 says yes at day 70.

Nothing about the house changed. The math in their head did.

The difference is measured in thousands.

Comment

LIST

and I'll DM you my running list of Texas homes that have sat past 60 days, plus the exact payment breakdown on any one you pick

Save this for later.