

Three transplants.
Same salary. One keeps $9,000 more.

What's inside

- Same house, three prices
- Tax rates stack
- Hail alley premium
- Miles versus minutes
- The ninety day tax
- Where nine grand sits

Same House, Three Prices

A 2,300 square foot house prices very differently in San Antonio, Austin and DFW.

Most people moving here only compare that one number.

The sticker price lies twice.

Your Tax Rate Has Layers

County, city, school district and sometimes a special district all stack on the same house.

Two identical homes ten minutes apart can sit half a point away from each other.

The sky sends its own bill.

Hail Has A Price Tag

North of Dallas sits in one of the worst hail corridors in the country.

The same house insured in San Antonio quotes like a different property.

Thirty miles can beat twelve.

Miles Are Not Minutes

Twelve miles in Austin at five o'clock loses to thirty in San Antonio most days.

Toll roads across DFW and Austin bill you quietly, every single workday.

Ninety days a year cost extra.

August Runs The House

Roughly ninety days of triple digit heat every year.

Your electric meter, your lawn watering and your weekend plans all reroute around it.

Now add those four numbers.

Where The $9,000 Sits

Taxes, insurance, tolls and summer utilities.
Four lines, nothing else.

That is the whole gap between the three transplants. Same salary, same square footage, nine grand a year apart.

Three of the four move.

Comment

PLAN

and I'll DM you
the side by side cost sheet for San Antonio, Austin and DFW with your exact payment breakdown

Save this for later.