

4 in 10 Texas
listings cut price.
The rest did this.

What's inside

- More listings than usual
- The day 30 shift
- Price cuts vs quiet money
- What the other 6 did
- The ask that works

Inventory Is Back

Texas has more homes for sale than it has had in over a decade.

Buyers have real choices again, so nobody feels rushed.

The clock is doing something too.

Homes Sit Longer Now

The first two weeks is when a listing gets its real attention.

After that the showings thin out and the calls slow down.

Something changes around day 30.

The Price Cut Trap

Four out of ten sellers respond by dropping the number.

Buyers read a price cut as blood in the water and wait for the next one.

The rest moved a lot quieter.

What The Other Six Did

They left the list price alone and paid the buyer instead.

Closing costs covered. Rate bought down.
Repairs handled up front.

The seller nets more and the buyer feels it every single month.

Buyers leave this on the table.

Ask For The Money

Right now you can ask a seller to cover costs and still win the house.

Put it in the offer. Not after the inspection, when your leverage is already spent.

Your street is not the average.

Comment

LIST

and I'll DM you

the current days on market and concession number for your price range, plus the exact payment breakdown once a seller covers the buydown

Save this for later.