

Two identical houses
three miles apart.
One owner pays
$4,800 more.

What's inside

- Three blocks, different bill
- Rates that move
- The 7:40am reality
- August electric shock
- Your Saturday radius

The Invisible Line

Texas stacks city, county, school and special district rates onto one bill.

Cross one boundary by three blocks and the whole stack changes. The house looks identical from the street.

And the rate is not fixed.

Your Rate Can Move

Newer areas often carry a bond that paid for the roads and pipes before anyone lived there.

In some spots that rate falls off over time. In others it gets voted back up. Nobody hands you that history.

The next cost is not money.

The Twenty Minute Lie

Every drive time you read was measured at 10am on a Tuesday.

Sit in it at 7:40 on a weekday. In Austin and DFW that number can double, and you pay it twice a day forever.

And you have not met August.

August Runs The Budg

Summer electric bills here can run triple what you pay in February.

West facing glass, ceiling height and roof age move that number more than square footage does. Most transplants find out in year one.

Saturday is where people break.

The Weekend Radius

San Antonio puts you inside an hour of the Hill Country and a short run to the coast.

Austin trades traffic for water. DFW gives you lakes and the easier airport. You are picking a Saturday, not just a house.

I put all this on paper.

Comment

PLAN

and I'll DM you

the three metro cost sheet with tax rates by area, average summer utility ranges, real rush hour drive times, and the exact payment breakdown on any house you send me

Save this for later.