

Texas sellers are giving away
something worth more than discount

What's inside

- Inventory at decade highs
- Why price cuts backfire
- Concessions beat discounts
- Days on market leverage
- Selling in week one

Supply Flipped

Texas has more homes sitting on the market than any point in over a decade.

That is not a crash. It is just competition, and for once it is not aimed at you.

Price cuts are the bait.

The Price Cut Trap

Most cuts you see are just an overpriced home walking back to normal.

You are not getting a deal. You are watching a correction and calling it one.

The rate math nobody shows.

Ask For The Rate

A seller paying down your rate moves your money more than a small price drop does.

Same seller cost. Very different outcome for you every single month you own it.

But timing decides who pays.

Watch The Calendar

A home listed nine weeks ago has a seller doing math on two housing payments.

That is when concession requests stop being rude and start getting accepted.

Sellers read this backwards.

If You Are Selling

Your first ten days pull more real buyers than the next sixty combined.

Price for that window. Chasing the market down with cuts is how homes go stale.

I keep a list for this.

Comment

LIST

and I'll DM you

the exact concession ask to write into your offer, plus a side by side payment breakdown with and without a seller paid rate buydown

Save this for later.