

Transplants
budget for month
one. Month 14 is what breaks them.

What's inside

- The month 14 bill
- Commute math, not miles
- Heat you plan around
- School ratings that move
- What Texas gives back

Month Fourteen

Your first Texas tax bill often reflects the old owner's value, or a bare lot if the house was new.

Month 14 is when the county sends one based on what you actually paid.

That jump is the number nobody puts in their moving budget.

Distance is not the problem.

Miles Lie

Twelve miles in Austin at 8am is a different life than twelve miles at 10am.

In DFW people pay tolls daily just to buy back twenty minutes.

Ask for drive times, not distances, before you fall in love with a house.

Your calendar shrinks anyway.

The Summer Tax

June through September, outdoor life happens before nine and after eight.

San Antonio holds the heat longer than Austin does, and the electric bill follows.

Shade, orientation, and a working patio matter more here than square footage.

Your rating can move.

Ratings Are A Snapshot

Texas districts redraw attendance boundaries as new rooftops go up.

The campus you bought for can change while you still own the house.

Buy the district and the trend, not one number on an app.

You get something back for this.

What You Get Back

No state income tax means your take home is bigger from the first paycheck.

A full Saturday out costs a fraction of what it did in California or Illinois.

Hill country, the coast, and lake weekends are all one tank of gas away.

Most people run this too late.

Comment

PLAN

and I'll DM you

a month by month first year cost plan for San Antonio, Austin, or DFW, including the tax reassessment timing and your full payment breakdown

Save this for later.